

Cap on CIA probe held urged by Rockefeller

New York (Reuter)—A forthcoming book by William E. Colby, the former CIA director, says former Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller suggested Mr. Colby withhold information from the special commission investigating the CIA that Mr. Rockefeller headed, Newsweek magazine reported yesterday.

In the book, "Honorable Men," Mr. Colby says Mr. Rockefeller spoke to him after a 1975 hearing held by the Rockefeller Commission on the Central Intelligence Agency, the magazine said.

Mr. Colby, according to Newsweek, has written that Mr. Rockefeller "said in his most charming manner, 'Bill, do you really have to present all this material to us? We realize that there are secrets that you fellows need to keep...'"

"I got the message quite unmistakably, and I didn't like it," Newsweek quoted Mr. Colby as writing.
